

Teresa Morante Arona is an urban planner with a deep passion for shaping vibrant, sustainable and inclusive communities through her knowledge and expertise in urban development, data analytics and social planning. Teresa joined Bousfields' Community Engagement Practice as a Project Manager in January 2024.

After graduating from the Master of Science in Urban Planning program at the University of Toronto in 2021, Teresa worked in the non-profit sector as an education and research advisor, working with not-for-profit landlords and tenants. Since joining Bousfields, Teresa is using her experience and proficiencies to work on sustainable and resilient community engagement plans and public consultation strategies, while ensuring accessible spaces for community building and city planning.
